

Abstract Of The Disclosure

An electrochemical sensor for determining a gas concentration of a measuring gas using a sensor element that has at least one electrode situated on an ion-conducting solid electrolyte
5 body, an electrode lead leading to the electrode. The electrode lead is made of a material possessing no ionic conductivity or an ionic conductivity that is significantly less in comparison with the material of the electrode, and/or having a low resistance.

U.S. GOVERNMENT USE